Republican Warmongers Support Biden Presidency and Biden Supports War

I was, like many on the left, pleased that Trump has been kicked out of office. I am not a leftist, however, as I've said many times, I'm completely sick of his fake politics. That said, I recognize that Biden was not a superb pick; mine would've been Bernie Sanders. One of the few legitimate reasons I could understand someone voting for Trump again in 2020 would be that he, unlikely his immediate predecessors, has not started any new wars. True he has staffed his cabinet with warmongers and rattled the war saber so to speak from time to time, but even when it came to Iran, he simply didn't do it. Apparently we have Tucker to thank for that.

Biden on the other hand has been in favor of every war in recent history. He voted for the disastrous Iraq war and was the Vice President for an administration that increased the wars America was involved in from two to seven. Under Obama, the US dropped so many bombs in the Middle East we ran out of bombs. I could somewhat forgive Biden for all of that if during the campaign, he signed on to a radically different foreign policy. The exact opposite has been the case. He has promised to continued America's wars and every Republican warmonger imaginable, including Colin Powell and Never Trumpers like the Lincoln Project founder Rick Wilson have all backed Biden for President, and will probably be advising him. To make matters worse, a plurality of Biden's transition team are from organizations funded by the weapons industry.

Do I think Biden will start more wars? I doubt he will end any or stop escalating the ones we already have. Would second-term Trump start any wars or would it be like his first term? It is hard to say, but thankfully, we'll never know.
